One Hundredth Anniversary of Carpenter Family Celebrated Sun.

Many Descendants of James Carpenter Who Carved a Home Out of the Wilderness at Woodhull Gathered in Honor of the Event—Much Land Cleared by the Family Still in Hands of the Progeny.

The 100th anniversary of the settlement of the Carpenter family was observed Sunday, June 21 at the Baptist Church in East Troupsburg.

James Carpenter, at the age of thirty years, with his wife Elizabeth Dodge Carpenter and four sons, James Jr., Willis and William, twins, and Henry, then two and one-half years old, left their home in Steuben County, braving the terrors of pioneer life with as much fortitude as did Columbus to discover the new world. They reached the site of the old homestead in East Troupsburg, now known as the Willard Carpenter farm, the first week in June, 1831. This long journey was made by ox-team, carrying the family and a few household goods, sleeping under the canopy of heaven at night, providing his meat supply with his rifle and braving the hardships incident to the life of a pioneer.

The house which was their home for a number of years was built of logs with no doors, windows or chimney, bed clothing being hung at the openings to keep out the wild animals at night.

The orchard was started from apple seeds brought from his former home and transformed from their natural state to choice fruit by grafting.

In this new home were born to them six other children, Eliza, Marie, Mary, Thomas, Otis and Milton who died in infancy.

June 23, 1843, Mrs. Carpenter, who had done her duty so nobly, passed to her reward leaving Mr. Carpenter with nine children to care for in the wilderness. She was the first adult to be buried in the cemetery which was a part of the homestead.

During the Civil War Thomas gave his life in defense of his country at St. Elizabeth Hospital in Washington, D. C. Otis was wounded and disabled while in the line of duty and Henry was disabled by sickness. Willis and William being rejected because of physical disability. After the close of the war they attacked the wilderness and hewed out for themselves farms, some of which are the best in Western New York and most of these remaining in the family to the present day.

The dreams of Mr. Carpenter have come true and he rests from his labor on the farm he laid claim to one hundred years ago. Most of the first and second generations sleep in the cemetery across from the church. Many are scattered over the west and central part of the nation, yet all are a credit to the family who gathered Sunday in honor of the occasion, several of the sixth generation being present.

After the appetizing dinner served in the dining hall of the church members of the Carpenter clan gathered outside and listened to an interesting history of the family given by Ralph Carpenter of Knoxville, who with Mrs. Carpenter were instrumental in bringing the descendants together. A letter was read from James Carpenter, Jr., of Forest River, N. D., which was written September 26, 1903 and was to have been read at the Carpenter reunion of that year. This contained many interesting accounts of his early home, also a letter from Willis Brown of Kingmar, Kansas which contained interesting history, especially of the younger generation. Greetings to the Carpenter clan were sent from Mrs. Nettie Carpenter Greene of Summit Ark., a granddaughter of James Carpenter, Jr., and also from Mrs. Mary Carpenter Grant of Spokane, Wash. Following the reading of the letters brief remarks were made by Ray S. Brown of Addison.

A purse of $13.63 was given the Baptist Church to help toward necessary repairs. The land on which the church was built was given by Mr. Carpenter.

The assembly then attended the church service in a body and afterward departed to their respective homes.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. William Cooke, Knoxville, Pa.; Mrs. Alice Perry, Detroit, Mich.; The Misses Maud and Gertrude Symonds, Greene, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. James Devore and daughter Christine, Wellsville; Mrs. Charles Crane, Robert Miller and son Locklin of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Benus Miller of Salamanca; Mrs. Carol Miller and children Marian and Peter of Buffalo; Mrs. Etta Carpenter Rogers and son Harry of Rochester; Ward Rogers of Troupsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cooke and daughter Esther, Mr. and Mrs. Roe Matson and daughter Doris of Elmira; Miss Marian Carpenter of Lyons; Miss Marian Tallman of Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Carpenter, daughter Elsie Ruth of Elkland; Mr. and Mrs. Ray S. Brown and son Robert of Addison; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Stewart and daughter Onnolee of Canisteo; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Carpenter, daughter Kathleen, E. P. Bates, Mrs. Minnie Cilley, daughter Elizabeth and son Gene, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Brown and son Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. Sterle Olin, daughter Gertrude and sons Radcliffe, Donald, Gerald and William, all of this place.

In Memoriam

We all within our graves do sleep
A hundred years to come.
No living souls for us do weep
A hundred years to come
But others still our land will till
And others in our places fill,
And bright the sunshine as today
A hundred years to come.

Rathbone Well Big Producer

Speculation is rife regarding the future operations at the Alvah Allen well in Rathbone. A little over a week ago a conference by the owners of this well to decide whether they should continue deeper or should be satisfied with the flow they had of about 1,500,000 cu. ft. It was eventually decided to continue on to the Oriskany sand in spite of the fine flow of gas which was given off by this well. The hole was cased and drilling continued to the present depth of approximately 1000 feet; the flow of gas has contined to increase and indications now point to the probability that the well will be declared a producer and capped. An official of the Penn Company has stated that they were not giving out any information, but he added "we have a mighty fine well". The belief is current that the Allen well is now producing around three or four million cubic feet.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the fact that gas in paying quantities has been reached at 1,000 feet so near to Addison. When the Penn Company gives out actual production of this well a big influx of gas men is expected to the Rathbone section.

Cyclone Swept Through Addison Streets Late Saturday Afternoon

Sweeping down from Canisteo river with a force that beggars description, a cyclone tore through the village of Addison, Saturday evening, leaving a trail of devastation which held many a beautiful shade tree. The storm broke at 5:45 and for one half hour the twisting winds reached for everything that could be torn loose, while torrents of rain added to the roar that almost drowned the sharper crashes of falling trees. Many trees fell across the roofs of houses and several barns were destroyed.

The falling trees broke electric wires and telephone cables, so that when darkness fell merchants on Main stret were compelled to resort to the lighting means available seventy five years ago, the feeble gleams of candles replacing the customary glare of electric lamps in the business section for Saturday evening.

The storm seemed to be local, descending to the valley bottom a short distance west of Addison, and spending the greater part of its fury in sweeping through the village. The greatest havoc was wrought on the south side, a great number of handsome shade trees being uprooted or twisted off. Sections of the roofing were blown off the Doddato Confectionery and the Sutliff cirgar stores, quantities of rain pouring in. Fallen trees for a time blocked off Maple street, Goodhue street and Farnham street, and a large mass of twisted trees fell across upper South street completely blocking off the Orr Hill road.

A large gambrel roofed barn and a long tobacco shed were blown down on the William Brown farm, while a silo was demolished on the Edgar Dann farm at the edge of the village. Heavy trees were blown across the houses belonging to Bryant Woodhouse, C. V. June, Harrison Nellis, John Campbell, Burrell Vastbinder, and Willis Perry. Many cherry trees with their fruit just ripening were snapped off like twigs by the force of the twister.

What appeared like a most miraculous escape occurred on South street, when an immense elm was dropped between two houses. The great tree had probably been standing at the spot for more than 100 years, and its three foot trunk had resisted storms without number. But Saturday's cyclone seemed to single the giant out, and with herculean jerk, snatched the wide-spreading roots out of the ground with tons of earth clinging that left a yawning hole large enough to bury a team of horses. Down crashed the great elm in the narrow space between the houses of Jackson Foland and Mrs. Fred Donaldson, its branches brushing the side of the former and extending over the Donaldson porch, half obscurring the small dwelling from view. Had this tree fallen a few feet to either side, one or the other of these houses would have been crushed like an egg-shell.

Playing true to the usual freaks of cyclone, this storm cut queer capers wherever it passed. Many trees had single branches twisted from their trunks, while the main stem remained standing. One large elm standing on the bank of Tuscarora Creek, had the upper centr trunk snatched out like a farm hand "suckers" tobacco, while the lower trunk and branches remained making a grotesque bowl like appearance.

The most damaging pranks of the storm, however, were played at the Brown Farm. The gambrel roofed barn evidently stood in the direct path of the twister, and fire could hardly more thoroughly demolished the structure. On the foundation there was left only the floor planks and part of the granary which was built of double boards with sheet metal between. One long timber lay a short distance away, but all the other beams were reduced to splinters or carried far beyond the range of the eye. One section of the roof hung over the top of an electric line pole near the highway, another large section about fifteen by thirty feet square lay near the main house some thirty rods distant, while still another section of this perambulating roof was carried on the hill a quarter of a mile north east. Almost directly in the line along which the wind strewed this wreckage, stood the farm tenant house and two small outbuildings, standing blithely uninjured.

The tobacco shed, one of the longest buildings of its kind in the county, had its roof picked up intact and set some thirty feet to one side as the sidewalls were reduced to a mass of wreckage.

Many other freaks were reported concerning the storm. Robert Bush was seated in Sherman Slocum's car when a tree was blown across the machine's roof, Bust escaping uninjured, if not unfrightened. On the W. S. Long farm the milking machine was disgarded when the current was cut off, and the owner and his help were milking the large dairy by hand. A flash of lightening played in the door and every cow in the herd instantly knelt on the concrete floor.

Serious as the individual losses of the storm have been, Addison people feel most keenly the loss of two beautiful trees in front of the new school building. The large maples were left to help form the nucleus of the landscaping operations at the immediate front of the school, and their loss will be irreparable for years to come.

The address which was delivered by Rev. Harry L. Somers, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Canisteo, on "Self Control" was full of thought for the graduates and entire audience as well. As an illustration he used the self control shown by Colonel Charles Lindbergh in his flight across the ocean and the welcome given him in Washington upon his return home.

The senior prize given each year by Dr. E. E. Webster to the one having the highest average during their four years in high school was presented by Professor Frank Minckler for Dr. Webster who was unable to present the gift personally. OUR GRADUATES

We pause this week to extend congratulations to the seniors of the local high school, who have surmounted many difficult obstacles until this week they received their diplomas. It is no small thing to graduate from high school. Not so long ago a very small percentage of the pupils who entered the first grade, finished their academic course. The fact that the numbers in our graduating class are steadily increasing, is a fine commentary on the progress of our times, and the will of our students to attain the goals they set.

Sometimes in retrospection, we marvel at the tremendous strides by which civilization has advanced during the past fifty years. We wonder what marvels there are left to be unfolded, that can improve our Utopia of the present. Yet, the very thought convicts us of stupidity. The number of students receiving diplomas from high schools and colleges is leaping rapidly upward; the enormous spread of knowledge through books, papers and magazines, can indicate one thing only. The brains of the people who inhabit the world are rapidly developing!

For thousands of years after the Heidelberg Man first blinked from his cave, this development started at a snail's peace. For hundreds of years after the first recording of history, the rate was still incredibly slow. But, during the last hundred years man has picked up speed with the machines he has invented, until we can cut through space at the rate of 300 miles an hour.

We congratulate our graduates on their attainments. Yet with the same breath, we pause to wonder to what heights they may lead us.

UNEASY LIES THE HEAD

During the past twelve years the general attitude toward the Presidency of the United States has suffered a change which, if continued, will eventually affect the quality of man willing to undertake the leadership of the country.

Until the second term of President Wilson most students had been immune to personal attack. The presidency stood for something which should not be destroyed. It was like the flag, the symbol of Government. The office was to be respected and held aloof from disparagement.

Mary Roberts Rinehart calls attention to the fact that this immunity of the office ceased with President Wilson. She writes forcibly and fearlessly regarding the resultant situation in a current provcative article in a current magazine. "The new use of a President as a whipping boy by his political enemies is dangerous," she asserts. "Deliberate attempts are made to ruin him, merely that his party may be destroyed with him. Why is this dangerous? Because respect for the presidential office is a part of the respect for all Government, and when a hostile Senate plus an inflammatory portion of the press deliberately belittles the one, it undermines the other."

No President goes into office to destroy the country. Practical politics, personal ambition and idealism alike dictate that he shall give the nation the best that is in him. He may appeal to the popular mind or he may not. Probably not, for there is no time in the office today for showmanship.

The presidential job, under the most favorable conditions, is a burden few men have the temperament and physique to stand without breaking. At its worst it is a man-killing position, stultifying to pride as well as to effort, and increasingly difficult to administer.

Perhaps it needs reorganizing. As things are, it will be difficult as time goes on to secure men physically and mentally able to carry it. Certainly it needs whole-hearted public support, and there should surely be a restoration of the dignity of the office and its immunity from attack.

WHAT AILS US?

The Wickersham Commission has made another report in which it discovered that the country is suffering from too much politics and too little prosecution of law violators. It recommends that the public prosecutors, Federal and State, should be selected with less regard to political affiliations and pulls. Criticize the Wickersham Commission all you want to, but if you will take time to read the recommendations it makes, you will have to agree that they are hitting the public pretty hard—telling what really ails us.

$1000 FOR A ROSE GARDEN

Rose growers from all parts of the United States will assemble this month in Syracuse, N. Y., for the annual meeting of the American Rose Society. A feature of the program will be the announcement of details of a prize award of $1000, given by a magazine for the best public rose garden. An innovation in flower study will be the display of colored motion pictures taken by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dey of roses found by them in South American and West Indian gardens.

KING AL'S THRONE TOTTERS

The unsinkable ship has been sunk, the fire-proof building has been burned, and now at last, the invulnerable law-breaker, the man standing so great in the list of arch criminals, has been brought to the bar of justice and faced with a charge to which he dared plead only, "guilty". Scar Faced Al Capone has long defied the laws of state and federal government, laughing at the orders of society he has ordered this enemy killed, or that puppet mercilessly "put on the spot". He has laughed long and mockingly, yet at length the laugh has turned to a cry for mercy; mercy indeed to one who has been stranger to the word.

Capone, the king of Chicago's underworld was able to find alibis for murders, and protection for his beer running activities, but a keen nosed federal servant started on the track of income tax evasion, and the trail became a hot scent that dogged Al's footsteps and led to his conviction without trial. A man who spends vast sums of money must have an income, and when he tries to evade the income tax, he trips on a snag that conceals a bear trap. The very statements issuing from Capone's own mouth were enough to convict him, for when charged with vagrancy in an attempted deportation proceeding, the gang chief boasted boldly of the thousands he was contributing to support certain families in Chicago. Yet, a man cannot give money away without first getting it, and altogether the web is dragging Al to a certain prison sentence.

Thus it proves, no matter how smart a law-breaker thinks himself, there is always some law that can trip him. At present the boot-leggers are giving a long suffering public the "horse laugh", because the federal courts are so cluttered with cases of liquor law violations, that it seems an endless thing to bring a speak-easy proprietor to justice. Some of these same "wise" ones are apt soon to be singing a different story. The nuisance laws are proving in many places in which put to work, that they are a most elastic statute, and many a boot-legger who has been able to defy the slow progress of federal law, is learning to his sorrow that this resurrected law has teeth.

As soon as violation of any law becomes unprofitable, just so soon will the wholesale violation of the law cease. For every ailment there is to be found a cure; for the Capones an income tax warrant, and for the local artists—well name them yourselves. Their time is coming too, for there is no unsinkable ship, there is no fireproof building and there is no invulnerable law-breaker.

ARE YOU PREPARED

How would you fight a sudden fire in your home? This is a question that every man, woman and child should be prepared to answer. Year by year as our population increases the toll paid to this evil enemy of mankind grows greater and greater.

Five hundred million dollars a year is the staggering levy exacted by the fire demon, but even this huge sum cannot compensate the victims for their grief and discouragement as they suffer the loss of loved ones and see possessions that cannot be bought with money ruthlessly consumed by the flames.

The knowledge that so much of this loss is preventable does not make it any less bitter. When fire starts it is an infant, but a few seconds later it may be a roaring monster that overwhelms the puny efforts of unaided human hands.

Preparedness is half the battle. The water bucket and hose are effective if they are immediately available, but often the very incident that started the fire may have rendered the water supply unavailable.

Every house, every barn and every apartment in the land should be protected with the simple, inexpensive and efficient hand fire extinguishers that are now available. With them it does not matter if the flames are caused by gasoline or other material, because they smother the oxygen supply necessary for the maintenance of the fire. Water may spread such a fire.

Every householder owes it to his family to equip the house with hand fire extinguishers, as many of them as are needed. They should be kept where they can be reached quickly. Everyone in the house should know where they are. You may well thank your heavenly stars some day that you were thus prepared.

WHEN IN NEW YORK, "WATCH YOUR STEP"

The Hotel Association of New York City has again issued a warning to travelers to beware the public porter and so-called "gyp" taxicab operator when visiting the metropolis. The association has been waging a campaign against this form of racketeering for the past several months with some success, due to the cooperation of those visiting the city.

Officials of the association feel, that with the continued cooperation of travelers, this form of racketeering can be eventually eliminated. All travelers are warned against accepting information from strangers while in New York City. Travelers are urged to go direct to the hotel of their choice, regardless of what strangers may tell them, and refuse to believe such stories as "the hotel is filled up," it has been closed for the summer", "it is being torn down for a new office building", or the like.

The traveler is on safe ground if he accepts information only from official terminal police and red caps at railroad and bus terminals, from ship officials and employees and recognized hotel runners on the piers and from police and Travel Aid representatives at all points of travel. The association also suggests that travelers in New York City insist on riding in taxicabs operated at the fifteen cents the first quarter mile and five cents each additional quarter mile rate. Such cabs as these are operated by trustworthy and responsible individuals.

CHEER NEWS

With official statements showing that bank deposits throughout the country are increasing, and that business failures are fewer; that wholesale and retail prices have gone down, and that agricultural products bring better prices, it may not be improper to do a little cheering on account of these evidences of better times.

Main Street Looks at Broadway

By OBSERVER

Spatterdashes

Do you remember the first pair of spats you ever saw? Or perhaps you live in a town where they shod men like that first, before they find out what is the matter. This is to notify one and all that the shooting season on spats is forever closed.

White Wing Dudes

Confidentially, we wear them all winter, and so, when we saw the street cleaners sporting them we aroused more than a little curiosity.

"How does it come about that you are wearing spats?" we nervously asked one gutter Chesterfield.

He just grinned, and then told us they were the most comfortable articles of wearing apparel he had ever worn. "They keep the dirt out of the tops of my shoes," said he, and I saw the point.

"They [illegible] anything either," he [illegible] you'd be surprised at the number of pairs I find in emptying garbage cans."

Where Old Hats Go

When everybody wore silk hats there was a rushing trade in second hand hats, cabbies getting most of them. Now the stage costumers buy up most of them and sell them to magicians and actors for fifty cents each. There also is a strong market for them in Central Africa, where native chieftains regard them in much the same light as King Alfonso did his jeweled crown. How many thousands are sold in equatorial Africa may never be known.

Women's Hats

Occasionally one sees pictures of women of fashion in the gay '90s crowned with an enormous hat with ostrich feathers and looking like a head of rhubarb or a gooseberry bush, at least in size. Such pictures always give one a laugh.

In New York City, which any New Yorker will tell you is the best dressed city in the world, one cannot walk more than a few blocks on ultra-fashionable Fifth Avenue without encountering some women well past seventy, decked out in those original hats. Most of them wear their skirts to the ground, carry reticules and look like a page out of Godey's Ladies' Book, which, you may recall, was the fashion gazette of Civil War days.

These old women are treated with respect by everybody. This is probably the only place in the world where their manner of dressing would not excite derision.

The Three D's

THERE have been many serious conferences in this year of tough business, and recently I attended one of them.

The problem was whether a certain industry, which was encountering difficulties, could be kept going. Three men spoke; their remarks were about as follows:

First Man: Conditions are much worse than anybody is willing to admit. Car loadings are off; steel production is flat; the automobile industry is on its back; every business barometer points down. You can argue that the country has faced the same situation before and has come through. But this is different. Now America is a world power, dependent on world markets. Wherever you look in the world you see nothing but trouble. I think that any enterprise which is losing money ought to be stopped. We are not justified in taking chances.

Second Man: I wouldn't go as far as the first speaker. Things are undeniably bad and may get worse, but I do not think we are justified in assuming that the world is going busted. What we need is plenty of time to get all the facts and talk them over and be sure we are right. I suggest we appoint a committee, and then we can meet again in a couple of weeks and have another conference.

Third Man: I disagree with everything that has been said. This depression isn't different from a hundred others that have preceded it. Always people lose hope just when the turn is about to come. Always it is argued that "conditions this time are different." I do not see that we shall gain anything by appointing committees or delaying action. What we need is not more facts but more guts. I am in favor of going to work right now to pull this business through.

Men divide themselves into different classifications which are called by various names. There are the optimists who are consistently hopeful and the pessimists who always fear the worst.

There are what the psychologists term the "introverts," those whose eyes are turned inward, the brooders, the hypocondriacs, the mystics; and the "extraverts," whose vision is outward and forward.

In good days it is not so easy to distinguish, but these past few months have been a testing time. They have divided all men into three great groups:

The Defeatists—who say conditions are different; it can't be done.

The Debaters—who say, let us appoint a commission and adjourn until another time.

The Doers—who say, let us pick out the toughest problems and hit it first.

Each of us falls into one or the other of these groups. In which one are you?

JESUS THE WORLD'S SAVIOUR

With this study we concluded a six months course on the Life of Christ during which the texts have been taken from Luke. Read at least from Luke 14 to the end of the book, and make a survey of the entire gospel if possible. You have been journeying with Jesus and the disciples from Galilee to Jerusalem by way of Perea. Parables were used frequently to drive home the truth to indifferent or to eager listeners. Then we came to Jericho with Him, after fording the Jordan near that ancient city.

The steep climb was then made from Jericho to Bethany, where the Teacher paused during the observance of the Jewish Sabbath. After sundown of the Sabbath a banquet was provided at the home of a man who had been cured of his leprosy, which she thought no one would observe her act of testimony, Mary—the sister of Lazarus—came with her precious ointment and anointed Jesus. The odour disclosed her deed and Judas began to criticise, but the Master defended her.

Early on the first day of the week Jesus, and others who had come up for the Passover, went in procession to the Holy City. Incidents are thick along the way. On Thursday the Passover was celebrated and the Lord's Supper instituted. From the upper room the little company went to the Garden of Gethsemane where Judas's kiss led to the arrest. Trials followed to the number of six after which He was taken to Calvary for the terrible crucifixion. When he said "It is finished" atonement had been made for the sins of mankind. The grave could not hold even His body and on Sunday the resurrection took place

MEAT

Meat packers are making a great to-do over the advice of the U. S. Public Health Service that people should eat less meat in Summer. The packers have sent a protest to the Government, saying that Eskimos live on meat the year around and do not suffer from it.

This is an interesting example of the way in which commercial interests try to influence Governmental affairs. The public health is a secondary consideration with the packers; they are concerned with selling more meat.

Americans are the largest meat eaters in the world. Also we have the highest rate of deaths from heart disease and hardening of the arteries. I asked an eminent heart specialist the other day whether there was any connection between these two facts. His reply was that meat is a highly concentrated source of muscular energy which should be used sparingly by everybody who does not regularly do a great deal of heavy physical work or exercise.

"Eat what you like, but all in moderation," was his advice, which sounds like good common sense.

GAMBLING

A colored man in Boston won $150,000 in a gambling pool on the British Derby. Thousands of other Americans won large sums and the city newspapers have printed columns about their winnings, which will make it easier for the sellers of chances on these events to rope in more suckers next year. Lotteries and other forms of gambling are illegal in most of the United States, but it is questionable whether they do any more harm than unlimited speculation in stocks or grain. The desire to get something for nothing is inherent in human nature. Mankind has always gambled and always will.

Nevada has recently legalized gambling and is licensing gambling establishments. A curious result of this is that a great gambling center will be set up close to the Government's "model city" at the Boulder Dam, on a twenty-acre strip which the authorities overlooked in acquiring land for the town site. Prohibition laws, it is said, will be strictly enforced, but it is easy to foretell where a considerable part of the wages paid to workers on the big dam will go.

TELEVISION

So many miracles have been performed by science in the past few years that we are ready to believe that anything is possible. That explains why the public has been so easily "sold" on the idea that before long we shall be able to see distant events while they are occurring, by radio television.

Scientific experiments in this field are not so confident. The technical problems to be overcome are the most difficult they have ever encountered. Leaders in radio development are hopeful but not certain. H. P. Davis, "father of broadcasting," Lee De Forrest, inventor of the radio tube, Harold A. La Fount, of the Federal Radio Commission, Ray H. Manson, president of the Institute of Radio Engineers, and several others have recently stated that it will be years before broadcast television will be commercially practical, if at all.

Today a small picture in motion can be sent by radio, or better by wire, over apparatus which costs about $100,000 at each end of the line. That is the best that has been done so far. Thousands of clever engineers are working on the problem of improving and cheapening television, but few are willing to promise anything very definite.

DIESEL

Walter Lees and Frederick Brossy recently flew their airplane over Jacksonville Beach for 84 hours and 33 minutes without refueling. The engine that made it possible for them to stay so long in the air is the latest application to aviation of the invention of the late Rudolf Diesel, an engine which uses crude oil instead of gasoline, and ignites its fuel by the heat of compressed air and so needs no electrical ignition system.

Diesel engines today drive half of the world's ships, at a third of the operating cost of steam engines. Building them light enough to fly with, is a problem which engineers are beginning to overcome.

The new Navy Zeppelins being built at Akron will have Diesel engines. So will most of the airplanes and airships of the near future. Fifty years from now some other kind of engine may supplant the Diesels in turn.

Base Ball Pools Again Are Operating At Capital City

Albany, June 23.—Following the recent expose in this correspondence of Albany's renewed fame as a gambling center, Governor Roosevelt sent a letter to the Sheriffs of Albany and Rensselaer Counties calling attention to "rumors" that baseball pools were again in operation in their respective bailiwicks. The officials report that they have "taken action" in the matter, but almost the only net result to date is the placing of orders in the poolrooms and policy "dumps" that baseball pool tickets are to be sold and policy plays accepted only from persons known to the agents. In refutation of the claim that the sale of baseball pool tickets has been stopped, two tickets were recently sent to the Governor by a prominnt citizen, with the name and number of the agent from whom they had been bought, and with the advice that if the Governor kept them he might win a prize.

It is freely asserted that so far as gambling is concerned Albany is the widest open city in the State, not excepting New York. Of course that could not be the case without the protection of the officials of Albany City and Albany County, who happen to be members of Governor Roosevelt's own party. No one doubts that if the Governor so willed he could put a stop to it in a week—though he would alienate some rather important political supporters in so doing. But some of his friends believe he will alienate more important support by continued inaction in the face of widespread knowledge of conditions. Indeed there are a good many keen observers who hold that Governor Smith's failure to cope with an exactly similar situation, which finally was cleaned up by federal officials from Massachusetts, was in no small measure responsible for his failure to carry the State for President.

So far as reported to the departments here, only one arrest has been made this year under the traffic law of th State which formerly mentioned 30 miles an hour as a legitimate speed and now says 40 miles. This took place when a motorist speeded through an unincorporated village at better than 40 miles an hour when a group of school children were just dismounting from a bus. Had this been in an incorporated village, likely it would not have been necessary to invoke the State law, as villages and towns still have the authority through local legislation to limit speed within their boundaries as low as 20 miles an hour, and many municipalities have such ordinances.

Thomas M. Lynch, President of the State Tax Commission, is out with hammer and tongs after his fellow cabinet member, Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, Superintendnt of Public Works, bcause Col. Greene said that he had found persons recommended to him for appointment to State jobs by politicians "were not more than 30 per cent efficient." As Mr. Lynch is very close to Governor Roosevelt it is felt in many quarters that his rebuke to the colonel was inspired from the Executive Mansion. Governor Roosevelt has on many occasions severely criticised the efficiency of the county, town and village officials over the State, and to have a member of his own cabinet, and a Democrat at that, admit that the appointees of one of the big departments of the State are less than a third of what they ought to be, might naturally be expected to stir him up. Outside of job-holding circles the impression seems to be pretty general that Mr. Greene knew what he was talking about. It is understood he has a number of concrete examples to back up his case, but unless pressed too far he is not expected to use them, as they might prove embarrassing to some polical leaders of his own party.

During the year 1930 there were in New York State 527 persons known to carry germs of typhoid fever, but who were not sick with the disease, according to Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., Commissioner of the State Department of Health. Such people are known as typhoid carriers and they are much more dangerous to the health of others than are people sick abed with typhoid, because in the latter case the patients are isolated and precautions are taken, while carriers are free to come and go and may readily infect others unless they are discovered and instructed in their personal hygiene and restrained from all connection with the preparation of food. Every once in a while there is an outbreak of typhoid from no apparent cause, which is later discovered to have been started by germs from one of these carriers, possibly himself ignorant of the potential danger which he carries about with him. Some of these carriers have been found employed as cooks, dairy workers, hotel maids, etc., and have been the innocent cause of many cases of illness as well as a number of deaths. For this reason the health authorities are at all times on the trail of the carriers, and, once found keep tab on them year after year. Information of typhoid cases of mysterious origin is welcomed by the Department of Health, and Dr Parran gives assurance that they will receive prompt attention.

The Tammany Democrats of New York City have met defeat in another of their efforts to cripple the legislative investigation in progress there. They attacked the constitutionality of the act appropriating funds for the purpose, but the Attorney General has rendered an opinion upholding the law. There are other hurdles to pass, as a corps of some twenty lawyers is constantly busy devising schemes to block the work of the committee. Meanwhile almost every day some prominent Tammany leader blossoms forth with a declaration that the present city administration "has nothing to fear" and "welcomes the investigation."

An important ruling concerning records of births, marriages and deaths has just been made by Attorney General Bennett. It is that all such are "the commonest kind of public records," and should be open to inspection. Under the new ruling no public official may deny such inspection, but if a transcript is desired a reasonable fee may be charged for that service.

Asparague Beetles

The food for next year's crop of asparagus will be stored in the roots this summer. It is necessary to keep the plants in good shape by killing the beetles. Directions for poisoning them were given last month. It is also possible to hand pick them and drop them into a pan of water having kerosene on top. The young of the orange colored ones with spots work mostly inside the asparagus berries; but the young of the other species are very destructive to the foliage.

WELLSBORO PLAYS HERE SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Addison Fans Will See Wellsboro's Veteran All-Star Cast in Action This Week

One of the crucial games of the season and also one that promises to be one of the greatest battls of the year will be played at Tuscarora Field next Sunday, when the Wellsboro veteran all-star team meets the locals. They out-lucked and outwaited Addison last Sunday at Wellsboro for a 5 to 4 victory, but the locals are confident of turning the tables this week. Wellsboro is touted to have the best infield in the League in Eddie Hill, Lloyd, Kline and Hart, men who have made baseball history around Wellsboro, Painted Post and Corning for years. The Addison inner works, Whitmore, Hewson, C. Hickey, J. and D. Grange matched them at every point last Sunday and far out hit them. Ripley will pitch for Addison and while he deserved to win last Sunday, is confident that he will come through ahead this week. A victory this week will entirely off set the set back last week. Wellsboro will undoubtedly start their veteran speed ball pitcher, Red Ludlum and Addison will have their work cut out to best him.

The past few games have seen big crowds at Tuscarora Field and Sunday will undoubtedly see the largest attendance of the year. The outfield will be mowed this week and the infield is now the fastest that it has ever been. There is always ample parking room at the field, but the first there get the best places. With a victory this week, the locals will again probably be tied for first place. They are now tied with Elkland and Westfield in the second line of standings. The game will be called at 3 P. M. as usual.

Never use canned foods of which you have any suspicions. Odor and appearance will tell enough, without the risk of tasting. When in doubt, throw it out.

DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES

Albany, N. Y., June 22.—An important change in the Massachusetts law affecting motor vehicles or trailers owned by non-residents will take effect June 26, according to an announcement made today by Charles A. Harnett, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. On and after that date such vehicles, if owners have complied with the laws of the states in which they reside, may be driven in Massachusetts for thirty days without being registered in Massachusetts. A permit issued by the Registrar of Motor Vehicles and motor car liability policies will be required if the cars owned by non-residents are to be operated in Massachussetts for a longer period than thirty days.

Under reciprocal agreement, in effect heretofore, passenger cars owned by residents of New York State were permitted to be operated in Massachusstts throughout the year, commercial cars being limited to thirty days, without Massachusetts registration.

The effect of the new Massachusetts law is to require liability insurance in the case of all non-resident owners if their cars are to be operated in that state longer than thirty days in a year. There can be no reciprocal agreement so far as this State is concerned, as New York does not exact compulsory insurance, while in Massachusetts car registration is contingent upon such insurance.

BACK UP THE PRESIDENT!

But the silliest of all criticisms belabors the President because he has at all times endeavored to instil a spirit of optimism into the people and to bolster up their courage. His opponents doubtless would prefer a president who would always be emphasizing the possibility of disaster or one who, in the presence of gloom and depression, were to emulate the eloquence of an oyster. Truly, it is difficult to please some people.

Let's have a SHOWDOWN on this matter of TIRE COMPARISONS

WITH all the conflicting claims published about tires, it is obvious that misleading statements are being made. The only conclusion that you as a tire buyer can draw is that either we, as Firestone Dealers, are misrepresenting Firestone products, or that a certain mail order house is not telling the truth about theirs. Both can't be right—one or the other is misleading the public by their comparisons.

Firestone, in their advertising, only make comparisons that can be easily verified by the customer before buying tires. To attempt to substantiate the comparisons made by this mail order house, it would be necessary to go into a laboratory and employ experts.

The very reason that the comparisons made in Firestone advertising enable you to get the facts yourself, makes it unnecessary for Mr. Firestone to make affidavit on the truth of his statements or to file any complaint with the Federal Trade Commission, and then advertise it, in an attempt to lead the public to believe his statements were true.

Mr. Firestone doesn't ask you to accept comparisons about Firestone Tires and special brand mail order tires until you see the facts yourself. Neither do we. All we ask is that you make your own comparison.

We have cross sections cut from special brand mail order tires purchased from stocks of mail order house and from Firestone Tires—no "tricky" or misleading comparisons—come in today and make your own comparisons for Quality, Construction, and Prices. YOU and YOU ALONE be the judge!

Bring him along

...he, too, will be interested in THIS REMARKABLE Demonstration

If your husband is already interested in electric refrigeration, so much the better. Bring him along, and let the Standard Rating Scale show you both how to get the utmost for your money. Learn to judge electric refrigeration in this modern way. Ten minutes will tell you both that there IS a certain way to complete satisfaction, and show you how to be sure you get it. Come in to-day or to-morrow.

The Kelvinator line includes models priced from $182.50 installed, upward. Any one of these may be purchased on our Monthly Budget Plan.

A 3 YEAR GUARANTEE

STANDARD RATING SCALE for Electric Refrigeration

- Has it plenty of food and shelf space?
- Is the cabinet itself well designed, sturdily built and properly insulated?
- Is there provision for the freezing of an adequate supply of ice cubes? (Quantity of ice rather than number of cubes, which may be of large or small size, should be taken into consideration.)
- Will the refrigerator constantly maintain a proper temperature for the preservation of foods?
- Can the freezing of ice cubes and desserts be speeded up when the need arises?
- Can this extra freezing speed for ice cubes be had without affecting the temperature on the food shelves? (Too low a temperature on the shelves will, of course, injure food.)
- Is there a place to keep ice cream, meat, fish, game, "quick frosted" foods or extra ice cubes indefinitely at a below freezing temperature?
- Are these various temperatures (a. extra fast freezing; b. fast freezing; c. below freezing for storage; and d. normal food preservation temperature) automatically maintained without any attention from the owner?
- Does the refrigerating unit operate often or infrequently? (The fewer "stops" and "starts" the longer the unit will last and the less it costs to run.)
- How long will the cooling unit continue to cool the refrigerator even though the current is shut off? (Refrigeration should continue for 10 or 12 hours.)
- Can the back parts of all shelves, even the lowest, be reached without kneeling or sitting down?
- Has provision been made for keeping vegetables fresh and crisp?
- Can the refrigerator top be used to "set things down for a moment" while the contents of the cabinet are being re-arranged?
- Will the refrigerator add to the attractiveness of the kitchen?
- Has the experience of users over a long period of years proved the refrigerator long-lived and dependable?

The SCRAP BOOK

SWEET CLOVER
By Wallace Rice

Within what weeks the melilot
Gave forth its fragrance, I, a lad
Or never knew or quite forgot,
Save that 'twas while the year i glad.

Now know I that in bright July
It blossoms; and the perfume fine
Brings back my boyhood, until I
Am steeped in memory as with wine.

Now know I that the whole year long,
Though Winter chills or Summer cheers,
It writes along the weeks its songs
Even as my youth sings through my years.

Many New Strawberries Are Developed But Others Remain

People who avoid strawberries because of their high acidity need not deny themselves the pleasure of eating this luscious fruit if they will try some of the milder flavored varieties such as the New York, the Marshall, and the Chesapeake. Several hundred varieties of strawberries are grown in the United States, one for every locality and purpose, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture who have classified them for the benefit of growers and consumers. Of this large number of varieties, however, only about 40 are grown commercially, and 19 of these constitute 96 per cent of the acreage. The three leaders— Klondike, Aroma, and Howard 17—account for 63 per cent of the acreage in the country.

Climate and soil conditions are factors that determine to a large extent the best varieties to grow in the different sections of the country. The Missionary is the leading sort in Florida and along the Atlantic coast to Maryland. Most other parts of the South prefer the Klondike. The Blakemore, a new berry developed by the department is becoming popular in the Carolinas and as far north as New Jersey.

The Aroma is a favorite in most of the milder regions of the Central States, including the northern part of Arkansas and Tennessee, and the southern parts of Missouri, Illinois, and Indiana. The Dunlap is popular in the remainder of the Middle West. In the Northwest, Marshall, Oregon, Ettersburg 121, and Clark are most widely grown, while the Howard 17 is king north of the Ohio and Potomac and east of the Mississippi.

In recent years varieties adapted to special purposes have taken their places by the side of the older ones. The Ettersburg 121, grown in Washington and Oregon, is preferred by canners, while the new Blakemore appears to be especially good for preserving. The ice cream trade prefers the Marshall and Klondike.

New varieties of strawberries are being introduced constantly, the department says. Many of them possess no special value as compared with the well-established varieties, and most of them soon disappear from nurserymen's lists. Occasionally a new variety such as the Blakemore has merit enough to make a place for itself.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

THE EVIDENCE

My readers may possibly wonder why I am so frequently denouncing the six o'clock dinner; this, when so many of our foremost citizens indulge the feast as a sort of triumph of civilization.

(1) From a study of aged men and women, I find the longest-lived to be those who are hearty breakfast-eaters, and who do not load the digestive tract at the evening meal.

(2) From a study of vital statistics, I find that six o'clock dinner devotees succumb to "heart disease" or cerebral hemorrhage, never later than the middle sixties. These are city-dwellers, who are too busy to eat necessary meals until the day's business is done.

(3) If I were to inject the expressed juice of the average six o'clock dinner into a patient's veins, I feel sure that I would kill him instantly! Well—the six o'clock glutton gets those juices into his veins more slowly, hence he is slower about dying of "heart disease" than he'd be with intravenous injection.

(4) The tired body—the tired, half-exhausted nervous system cannot supply the necessary gastric and pancreatic fluids to digest a heavy six o'clock feed; hence the juices of the "gorge" are taken into the system by absorption, and in a shape that cannot be utilized in the repair of bodily tire—not all, nor half of it can be said to be fit.

(5) Hence, it is carried with the blood-current, an active poison, unfit for the human systemic repair. Hence the eater does not want breakfast next morning—has a feeble appetite at noon—but is ready for the disappointing over-feed at the following six o'clock. The very arteries of the heart become poisoned slowly. The vessels of the brain give way in their walls. Short breath and apoplectic symptoms develop slowly, insidiously. They finally kill.

(6) Any thinking physician, if he will observe carefully, cannot fail to agree with me. Lastly, if I want to have a groggy, heavy, indolent feeling tomorrow, I will stuff my carcass with a six o'clock dinner tonight, at the church dinner that I am billed to attend.

FARMERS KEEP RECORDS TWO METHODS AVAILABLE

On June 1 there were 64 dairies in Steuben County which were keeping records with the farm bureau and these include 1149 milking cows. There are two Dairy Herd Improvement Associations in the county, one in the Cohocton Valley operated by George Arnold in which there are enrolled 23 members with 434 cows. In this association 129 cows made the honor roll requirement of 1200 pounds of milk or 40 pounds of butterfat. One cow in the Edward Heinaman dairy produced 67 pounds of fat and 2241 pounds of milk and a cow of Fay Bennett's in Howard made 81.8 pounds of fat and 1810 pounds of milk. These were the two high cows in the association in milk and butterfat. Both are purebred Holsteins.

The Southern Steuben Association is managed by Delos Wilcox and in this association there are 25 members with 552 cows. A grade Jersey cow owned by George Stuart of Lindley led the association with 67 pounds of fat and 1488 pounds of milk and the second best record was made by a Holstein cow in the herd of Donald Saxton of Arkport with 62.5 pounds of fat and 1153 pounds of milk. One hundred and ten cows made the honor roll requirement.

Aother method of keeping records is the dairy Record Club in which there are 16 members. Each member weighs the milk and feed and this information together with the milk samples is sent to a testing laboratory at Ithaca. This service is less expensive than the Dairy Herd Improvement Association, especially for the man with the small dairy.

This type of service is available to any and all dairymen of Steuben County. Further information can be obtained from the Farm Bureau Office.

Insects will visit the garden this year, at least they always have. The new bulletin, the control of diseases and insects affecting vegetable crops, tells the known control for these pests in New York state. Much can be done to prevent the attack of some insects, and others need immediate attention when they appear. Get the bulletin and be prepared. Ask the office of publications at the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., for E-206. It is free.

Lettuce or other salad greens may be crisped in very cold water containing a little vinegar or lemon.

EARLY PLANTING BOOSTS SPUD YIELD

Cool Weather Favors Potatoes Planted Before May Twenty

Trials at the Cornell University experiment station show that potatoes planted by May 20 give higher yields than from all later plantings, according to a statement made by Professor Ora Smith in a radio talk from WEAI. He said these results are supported by records kept for 55 years at the Ohio experiment station which show that potato yields are influenced far more by the rainfall and temperature during July than of any other month. The higher the temperature in July the lower the yield.

The development of the tuber is most rapid when the temperature is 65 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Early planting gives better chances that the weather will be cooler at blossoming time, when the plants are the most sensitive.

ARM AMPUTATED

Manley W. Bennett, prominent in the Bath typographical fraternity, suffered amputation of his right arm, just above the elbow on Thursday. The amputation was performed at the Bath hospital.

Some weeks ago, Mr. Bennett, while employed in the Bath Courier office, injured the right index finger; the injury was given surgical attention, but blood poisoning developed. Despite all that could be done, it was necessary to amputate the finger; finally to arrest the blood poisoning. Mr. Bennett's wide circle of friends hope wide circle of friends hope sincere-sincerely for his early recovery.

KIDNEY WORMS OF SWINE

Control of the swine kidney worm, which causes heavy losses in the South, depends chiefly on good sanitation, says the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry. The eggs and larvae of this worm are comparatively short lived on pastures and lots that are well drained, exposed to the sun, and free from trash and litter. Pigs should be weaned as early as possible and moved to a clean pasture to shorten as much as possible their period of exposure to the larvae. Swine are not likely to discharge kidney-worm eggs before they are six months old. If pigs are raised under the swine-sanitation system and fed properly, most of them will be ready for market before they bekin to discharge any worm eggs.

Many purebred animals, particularly purebred bulls, are being introduced into the sections where cattle fever ticks and scrub sires held sway in the past.

PREVENT TERRACE FAILURES

Farm terraces sometimes fail for lack of maintenance. A little work each year with a plow or terracing instrument keeps a terrace up to the necessary width and height. Seeding to grass will prevent the erosion of embankments at sharp bends caused by the cutting action of the water. Preventing the concentration of water just below a terrace in furrows left after construction will often stop the formation of gullies between the terraces. This form of erosion between terraces often causes the channel to fill with soil during a single rain, causing the overtopping and breaking down of the terrace. Where water concentrates in a natural depression it be necessary to seed the depression to grass. Burrowing animals, large cracks that develop in dry periods, and low places in the top of the terrace caused by dragging farm machinery across often cause serious breaks that can be avoided by early repairs.

FARM BUREAU.

APPLY NOW FOR POULTRY CULLING SERVICE BEGINS EARLY IN JULY

The Farm Bureau issues the last call for the poultry culling service and those who want this work done should write the office directly. Culling will begin early in July and will be operated during the summer at a cost of 2 cents per bird and a minimum charge of $2.00 and the fee is reduced to 1½ cents for flocks as large as 300 or more.

Records show that best results are obtained if the culling is done early as feed is saved in getting rid of the poor layers sooner and because poultry prices are highest early in the shipping season.

Those farmers who want the help of an expert culler in going over their flocks to sort out the poor layers and non-producers should write the farm bureau immediately.

One of the most effective protectors against the nose botfly, which seriously annoys horses and whose larvae, or bots, interfere with digestion and may even cause stoppage of the digestive tract and death, is a piece of leather or belting about five inches wide. This is attached at each end to the bit rings by a string or snap so the entire lips, including the corners of the mouth, are protected. Protectors of this type can be made on the farm, or purchased. They are much better than the wire baskets or fringes of burlap or leather often used as protection against the nose botfly.

Sets National Record for Butterfat

DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES

Albany, N. Y., June 22.—Schools generally throughout the State will close in a few days for the summer vacation. Hundreds of children will then join the little ones who make the streets a playground. The responsibility of the automobile driver will be greater, and careful drivers will be more alert when driving through the cities. Charles A. Harnett, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, reports that in the first three months of 1931 the number of automobile accidents in this State involving children playing in the street was 1352, and 48 of these were fatal.

One of the most helpful signs in accident prevention is seen in the progress made in safety lessons at school. Nevertheless children may not readily sense danger and are not so apt to use caution in crossing thoroughfares. The motorist is advised to make allowance for this when children are on the streets, driving with his car under absolute control.

Twelve per cent of pedestrian deaths in this country during the first quarter of the year was due to the unexpected appearance of persons from behind parked cars. In many of these cases drivers are not at fault, as persons on the street are so near oncoming cars that accidents cannot be avoided. Children should be warned to look to the right and left before crossing a street, and when possible to avoid stepping into the roadway from behind cars parked against the curb. Motorists will avoid serious accidents if they drive slowly at danger points.

CHOOSE COOL DAY TO WASH WOOLENS

Keep Soft Fluffiness in Blankets By Careful Laundering, Says College of Home Economics

Fluffy, soft wool blankets can remain fluffy and soft indefinitely if laundered carefully, says the New York state college of home economics at Cornell University.

Wash wool blankets in a lively suds made from a concentrated solution of pure mild soap. The blanket should be gently squeezed with hands or, if a washing machine is used, left in that about seven minutes with the washer at lowest speed. Wet wool should be handled gently. Feed out the blanket, bit by bit, into a pan, looking carefully to see that no spots remain. Squeeze out the water lightly by hand, leaving plenty of water in the blanket. Hang the blanket in the shade, and shake it frequently to fluff it while it is drying. A breezy, sunny day is best for drying wools.

Back Hoover

(By J. W. H. de Belleville)

New York, June 22.—The campaign of vituperation against President Hoover presents no particular novelty to the thoughtful elements of the population. On the contrary, it is an apparently inevitable manifestation of the partisan spirit, which is a part and parcel of democracy. It bears no relation to that constructive criticism of the problems of government, which is always expected from the opposition and without which the party in power would rapidly deteriorate. It is exclusively a campaign of mud-slinging without reference to the public welfare.

Quite often the slanders are of such a character that they can only be whispered, but so contemptible is human nature in this particular that they spread with amazing rapidity. Strange to say, the more disgusting and incredible they are, the greater is the avidity with which they are seized upon and circulated. Abraham Lincoln was a notable target for this sort of calumny, and old-timers will recall the scurrilous stories that were circulated about even so fine a character as Grover Cleveland.

As the campaign for a second term approaches, these slanders become more and more venomous. No doubt President Coolidge outwitted the purveyors of this form of filth by refusing, almost a year in advance of the convention, to make a second run. At any rate, such ridicule as he was subjected to was of an inoffensive nature. The slandering of Pres. Hoover also has been mild in comparison with what some of his predecessors have had to endure. Indeed, the smearing that was done by the Raskob committee was so inept and crude in its conception and execution that it is not surprising that it reacted violently against those responsible for it. The one standing result has been to create an enormous amount of sympathy for the President and an equal amount of resentment against his accusers. Strange as it may seem in the face to be enjoying a greater degree of of the unusual depression, he seems popularity at the present moment than ever before.

The spontaneous expressions of enthusiasm which came from the recent conference of young Republicans in Washington is good evidence of the thorough understanding throughout the country of the difficulties which the President has had to face. Indeed, no chief executive of the United States during the past generation has been so harrassed as Herbert Hoover. War, of course, always brings tremendous responsibilities but it brings also a superabundance of patriotism which usually disarms cirticism and consolidates public sentiment behind the president. When, as in our Civil War, the conflict becomes unduly prolonged and the issue remains in doubt, there is bound to be widespread criticism either of the president and his board of strategy or of the military leaders in the field. But in the last two wars, which this country has fought, this situation did not arise. McKinley in the Spanish-American war and Wilson in the World war, at least, had at all times the united support of the people. Particularly in the World war, Congress stood behind President Wilson at every turn and never hesitated to place in his hands whatever power he required.

But a business depression like the present creates a sentiment which is actually the antithesis of the public enthusiasm which is aroused by every martial conflict. The gloomy forebodings arising from unemployment and from greatly reduced income in every line of business are the natural soil in which criticisms of the government are nurtured. If there is any time when it is important for the country that the president should have the whole-hearted support not only of the people but of the press, it is during a period of depression such as the whole world is now experiencing. To steer the nation safely through the storm and stress of a great business upheaval is as outstanding an accomplishment as the prosecution of a war to a successful conclusion, and there is at the present moment as imperative a necessity for unswerving loyalty and undivided support as ever existed in any crisis in the country's history. The newspaper editor or politician who in the present emergency indulges in wanton and malicious criticism of the President is quite as contemptible as the spy who in war betrays his country's secrets to the enemies.

No one doubts that generally speaking, the country is behind the President. The people are not insensible to the level-headed management of public affairs for which the present administration is responsible. At no time have the various departments and bureaus been brought to such a high state of efficiency as now. At no time has every emergency been met with more prompt and energetic action from the head of the nation. At no time has there been a greater necessity for conservatism and courage and at no time have these qualities been displayed to a greater degree than at present.

The silly criticisms of the tariff, indulged in mostly by adolescent newspaper writers, doctrinaire economists and free-traders, fall upon deaf ears. The people know that the vast industrial fabric of the United States was laid on the foundation of a high protective tariff, and the criticisms of the present law are precisely in the same vein and are based on precisely the same false premises as those that have been directed against every tariff law in the history of th country.

The fore part of the game was all Addison, but with the advent of Ludlum in the box Wellsboro took new life and by scoring three runs in the seventh on a single hit won the decision by a run margin. The game brought the two teams together for the first time and was one of the best played and hotly contested of the year. Two great infields came together and the Addison inner works was every whit as good as the Wellsboro veteran combination, with such stars of years' experience as Lloyd, Hill and Kline. The Addison infield matched them at every point and hit much harder. Hewson had a field day at third and D. Grange, who replaced him after he cut his finger by running into the wire screen, kept up the good work. Whitmore was the hitting sensation of the game with two mighty triples and a single. C. Hickey started a nifty double play and Orr made a good running catch. Johns, who started for Wellsboro, fell by the wayside under a deluge of hits in the fifth and Ludlum came to the rescue. The veteran speed baller was hit quite hard but kept the hits scattered. Ripley worked for Addison and deserved to win, but for one fielding lapse and a temporary wildness in the seventh, he would have pulled out nicely. Wellsboro's heavy hitters had all kinds of trouble with his slants and eight of them struck out while seven scattered hits were their best. Addison outhit Wellsboro by 9 hits to 7.

Hewson started the third with a single. LaChance was hit by a pitched ball and Hewson came home on D. Grange's single. Wellsboro went ahead in the third, Kline got a life on a fielder's choice. Lloyd walked and when Hill's fly was misjudged and went for a double, both men scored. Whitmore tied up the count in the fourth with a mighty drive to deep center for three bases, coming on home on Kline's wild heave to catch him at the plate. The fifth saw Addison going fast. LaChance walked and D. Grange drove a double to right. Johns hit J. Grange. P. Hickey drove one at Johns, which split the pitcher's finger and went for a single, LaChance scoring. Ludlum replaced Johns in the box. Orr forced Hickey at second, but D. Grange scored on the play. Ripley went fine until a temporary wildness in the seventh. The first man up was hit by a pitched ball and the next two walked. The first man was thrown out at the plate by D. Grange, but Lloyd tripled down the left field foul line and three runs came in, putting Wellsboro one run ahead. This ended the scoring. The scores follow:
